For paragraphs 262 to 269 substitute—

262. Packages on delivery will be carefully weighed and counted before receipt is given to the carrier. If there are no means of weighing, application will be made to the officer in charge of barracks, or other local officer, for the use of a machine. In the event of the weight of a package being less than that marked on it, or should any package show signs of having been tampered with or damaged in transit, the carrier's attention will be drawn to the fact, and the package will be opened in the presence of a witness (and if possible the person who delivered the stores) and the contents compared with the external marks, or with the packing notes or other documents received.

A.O. 48

263. Should any discrepancy be discovered, or any article be found damaged, the carrier's note or the bill of lading will be endorsed accordingly, the condition of the package on receipt being described, and in the absence of such endorsement the responsibility for loss or damage will rest with the officer receiving the stores.

264. Except as above, packages will be opened as soon as possible after receipt and the contents examined in the presence of two officers.

265. A commanding officer will at once report any discrepancies or damages to the Ordnance Officer of the clothing or ordnance dépôt by whom the issue was made. He will also take steps to investigate any loss or damage as laid down in King's Regulations. The quantities received will be brought to account and the vouchers amended.

266. When reporting a discrepancy, full information including the cost of repairing any damage will be given; all numbers and weights, together with any marks on the packages affording evidence of their having been tampered with will be carefully recorded. The packages with all wrappers and packing material will be retained until the enquiry closes. Any undue delay in reporting and investigating loss or damage will render the consignee responsible for the full quantities of stores invoiced.

267. When in special cases it is considered that supplies are liable to deteriorate after unpacking, the commanding officer or other responsible officer will cause the packages to be sealed, and will use his

268. When the contents are ultimately required the packages will be opened in the presence of two officers. Any discrepancies then discovered will be adjusted in the ledger by a certificate receipt or issue voucher. The discrepancies will be reported and any deficiency or damage investigated as directed in paragraphs 265 and 266.

269. At stations abroad, reports of discrepancies will, if necessary, be forwarded by the Chief Ordnance Officer at the station with his remarks to the Chief Ordnance Officer, Royal Army Clothing Department, and stating whether any deficiency or damage was noted on the bill of lading at the time of receipt. These reports will not, however, delay local investigation into the cause of loss or damage.
